HELLO UP THE DRUG STORE

Vagrant John McCann Got Ice-Cream Soda Without Cost.

BUT HE WANTED TOO MUCH

Demanding a Cigar, But the Amiable Proprietor Caused His Arrest.
Sandy Clarke Told the Truth, But Got Thirty Days in the Workhouse.
Coachmen's Day in the Court.

The drizzle that settled upon the city about daybreak kept up its monotonous sulky downpour far into the day, managing to cause additional misery in the police court, where fifteen men and women awaited trial.

The occupants of the pews took a great deal of interest in several field-faced, stout individuals, who drifted in the court every now and then, breathing of clove and strong water. They were a lot of coachmen interested in the case of one of them, on trial for fast driving.

"Mavvins, guine, hawvins" to you, as had as it is," said Flynn, possessing a horseman's salute, with two fingers and a hat brim, to the great edification of the whips, who smothered Mike with praise.
"Bee a fair old chap, now, ain't he," said one of the men in the pews, "and he's got with gray side choppers and a red-beef complexion. A ponderously heavy fellow, wearing a bottle-green cutaway and a pink waistcoat, after an appetizing choking of the blue in the face, shook hands warmly with Mike and said he was the finest fellow that ever wore the blue and brass of a policeman."

Another coachman, his derby dripping wet, and buttoning a perceptible odor of whisky in the collar of his mackintosh, dug Flynn under a short nap, saying he was the "wery devil of a feller, so he was." Mike doffed his helmet and replied "that flattery was nice, but duty was better."
"I would be gints please clear the hall an' be seated in the courtroom."

They did so, and had the pleasure of seeing their companion on trial acquitted by his honor.

SANDY AND THE TRUTH.

Sandy Clarke, colored, followed the driver, Sandy, in his three years of tramping, has not forgotten how to tell the truth.
He was found asleep last night in a freight car in the yards of the B. & P. railroad, by Special Officer Rupert.

"Unloaded, or not?" asked the judge, meaning the car.

Rupert looked puzzled, he did not know what the court referred to.

"You mean—" said the officer.

"Why the car, of course," interjected the judge.

"Well, your honor, they were both loaded," said Rupert, "Sandy as much as the car."

"Sandy, come around here and tell me about yourself," commanded his honor.

"Where do you come from?"

"I was born in Leeson, applied Clarke, a slim, delicate, yellow man."

"How long since you have worked?"

"Nearly free years."

"Been begging all that time, I suppose?" queried the judge.

"I suttney has," answered Sandy, frankly.

"Your truthfulness is certainly refreshing," remarked the judge. "You can go down for thirty days."

"Thank yo, boss," said Sandy. "I ain't been in a bed for a year, an' I know I'll git wan now."

Policeman Boyce helped John McCann, a chronic vagrant, into the stand. He caught McCann last night in a Ninth street drug store. John went in, ordered ice cream soda and refused to pay for it. The prior told McCann he'd make him a present of the drink but he must leave the store.

"Not on yer tynype," said Mac, "I want a seegar, and yer got to filling it up."

Boyce came in and sent McCann to the station house in the patrol wagon.

This morning the officer told Judge Kimball McCann was an old offender and had a penchant for buying things he could not pay for.

"What did you order that soda for?" said Judge Kimball. "You knew you couldn't pay for it."

"Sure I did," replied McCann, unabashed,
"but I had me thirst wile me."

"And you will have it with you for the next thirty days in the workhouse," said Judge Kimball, angrily, ordering McCann back.

A TEMPERANCE LECTURE.

Last night Nicholas Sexton was found by Volkman Hanover dead drunk, lying in the roadway of a South Washington alley.

This morning he pleaded hard for mercy, but Judge Kimball gave him fifteen days.

"I think a couple of weeks in the workhouse will do you good," said the court.
"You can get rid of the whisky that has got you in trouble."

Sexton said it didn't take him two weeks to get clear of his habit.

"I'm all over it now, judge," he pleaded.

"Yes, until you strike another saloon. You can't do that," replied the court. "Pass a fortnight of abstinence and it will break you up."

In the case of Ernest Foote and William Lewis, arrested by Policeman Harrover for shooting craps in an alley intersecting at Third and K streets northwest, last night, Judge Kimball dismissed Foote and fined Lewis $10.

Lewis pleaded guilty, and to the surprise of the courtroom, Judge Kimball made him a witness for the government.

"Step up here, boy," said his honor,
"raise your right hand, I am going to see you as a witness."

Lewis exonerated Foote, securing his release, but was sent down for thirty days himself in default of the fine. It is regulated around the court as a rather unusual practice to use a defendant as a witness under the circumstances of this particular case.

Another crap case was that of George Ponnel, Samuel Gale and George Shields, arrested by Ridge's alley by Policeman Harvey.

Samuel Bernard, colored, like the defendants, was a strong witness for the government. He said he saw the defendants playing under his window.

"I seed Samny," said Bernard, "shoot de bones, make his pint an' scoop in de de ground. Den dey crapped fo' eleven minits, warrint in dere winnins, w'en de officer cummed up."

The three gamblers refused to make a defense, paying a fine of $10 each.

STUDYING TWO FACES.

City Detectives on the Lookout for Desperate Murderers.

The police are making a study of the faces of two murderers who are badly wanted in other cities, and for whose apprehension rewards are offered. Last night descriptions of the men were sent to all the stations, with orders to arrest them promptly should they come to the city.

The fugitives are Rev. Francis Hermann, the Salt Lake City fiend, and Jeff Clark, who murdered Harry W. Rowland, of the First National Bank, at Tyler, Smith county, Texas.

The picture of Hermann shows him to be an exquisite sort of a fellow, in middle life.
He wears eye-glasses and is a blonde. For his arrest $500 reward is offered.

Jeff Clark is a determined, cool-looking Texan, twenty-eight years of age, and would not doubt prove a desperate man in a common. A reward of $600 is offered for his arrest and delivery to the authorities of Smith county, Texas. He murdered Harry Rowland on May 4, and fled, coming in this direction. Clark has black hair and eyes; he is thin on top of head; retreating forehead; pale complexion and clean shaven; weight, 135 pounds; height, 5 feet 10 inches.
He constantly keeps his throat, making a peculiar noise. He is a bartender by occupation, and at one time guarded convicts.
Clark frequents gambling houses, saloons and resorts of evil fame.

WAS KIDNAPED BY TRAMPS

Disappearance of Katie Mayhew, Eleven Years Ago, Explained.

Has Been Kept a Constant Prisoner by Her Father, at Whose Influence She Was Stolen.

Crawfordsville, Ind., June 4.—The sudden disappearance of little Katie Mayhew, the six-year-old child of Frank Mayhew and wife, eleven years ago, has been explained up at last. Mayhew had given her up for dead, while the distracted mother worried herself into a confirmed invalid over the loss of her child. She is in New York and has written to her mother.

Frank Mayhew was a contractor and married Alice Hardee. One daughter, Katie, was born to them. They finally were divorced, and Mayhew went to New York. Mr.
Mayhew kept the child under a decree of the court.

Eleven years ago, however, Katie being six years of age, suddenly disappeared.
She had started for Sunday school, but never reached her destination. A posse was organized and the country for miles around searched and the crooked dragger.
After two weeks search was abandoned.

No tidings of the missing child were heard until Tuesday, when Mrs. Hardee received a letter from New York. The letter was written in New York city, and stated that she had been kidnapped while going to Sunday school by two tramps, who kept her in a cave until the expiration of her disappearance had subsided.

She was then turned over to Mayhew, who had taken her to California, where they remained two years. Five years were spent in Australia, and the last four in New York. All attempts to escape, or communication with her mother or friends, were cut off, but two weeks ago she succeeded in getting away.

A letter from her to the chief of police here, inquiring for relatives, and telling all the circumstances of her disappearance, was turned over to her uncle, who left for New York on the first train. Her whereabouts are kept secret, as it is feared her father may recapture her before her uncle arrives.
